

The Augustinian Revolution in Theology: Illustrated by a Comparison With the Teaching of the Antiochene Divines of the Fourth and Fifth Centuries (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Augustinian Revolution in Theology: Illustrated by a Comparison With the Teaching of the Antiochene Divines of the Fourth and Fifth Centuries

When I was asked to find an editor for the present work I gladly undertook the task myself, first, on account of the deep respect I have long felt for the thoroughness, originality, and many-sidedness of the author, and next, on account of the difficulty, which amounted almost to an impossibility, of finding anyone who would enter sympathetically into the task. The views expressed here and elsewhere by the author are altogether untinged by the popularis aura and yet, or may I not rather say therefore, for many reasons, it is desirable that they should be made public, in order to their careful and impartial consideration, and this because of the light they throw on questions which have hitherto been approached with prepossessions not altogether justified by the facts.
